TedsWoodworking 16,000 Woodworking Plans

What's inside, who it suits, and what $67 actually buys

This guide summarises the material published on the product's own website: the plan library, the members area, the four bonuses, the one-time price and the refund terms. Nothing here is written from memory, and nothing here is a promise of results.

You measured twice, cut once, and the plan was still wrong. That's a plan problem, not a you problem.

The short version

TedsWoodworking is a one-time $67 purchase for lifetime access to a library the vendor states holds more than 16,000 project plans, each with cut lists, materials lists and dimensioned drawings. The vendor's standard membership price is $39/month, so

Still suffering through plans that don't add up

Where most downloaded plans fail: halfway through the build.

A plan looks fine on screen. You buy the lumber, start cutting, and three steps in the numbers stop agreeing with each other. A dimension is missing. The materials list is short by two boards. The assembly order skips the one step you actually needed.

That is the failure mode almost every free plan and cheap plan pack shares: it was drawn, but never built. Nobody put a saw to it before publishing. The cost is not the plan — it is the wasted lumber, the second trip to the store and the weekend you do not get back.

What the vendor says it does differently

Every plan is drafted, physically built and shop-tested before publication, so measurements, cut lists, hardware specs and assembly order are verified before the plan reaches a member.

- Dimensioned drawings on every plan, not a single sketch with two numbers on it
- A materials and cutting list you can hand over at the lumber yard
- An assembly order that follows the build the vendor states was completed first

How it works

01 Search the library

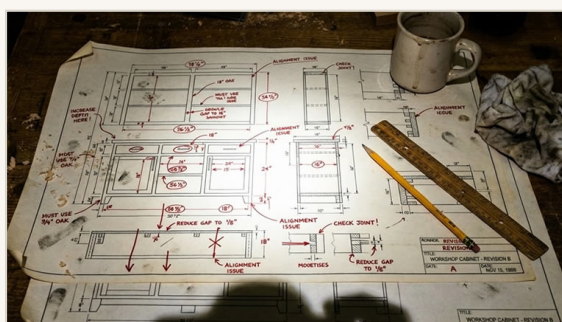

Type what you want to build. The members area returns matching plans with difficulty and material requirements shown up front.

02 Print the cut list

Each plan opens with a materials list and cutting list. Take it to the lumber yard and buy exactly what the project needs — once.

03 Follow the tested build order

Steps are sequenced the way the plan was physically built, with dimensioned drawings for each stage, including the joinery detail free plans skip.

Plans are built before they are published.

The order matters: search, print, buy, then cut. Every step the library adds is a step that removes a guess, which is where a weekend build usually goes wrong.

The ingredients of a usable plan

	TYPICAL FREE PLANS	TEDSWOODWORKING
Measurements	Often partial or missing	Dimensioned drawings on every plan
Materials list	Rarely included	Full materials and cutting list
Verification	Drawn, not built	Physically built and shop-tested
Project count	One at a time	16,000+ in one library
Ongoing cost	Free, but costly in wasted lumber	$67 once, lifetime access
Support	Comment sections	Free custom plan request included

The difference is not the drawing. It is whether anyone built the thing before publishing the plan — which is what determines whether your cut list is right the first time.

The lifetime members area, as pictured on the product's website.

Read the table as a checklist: if a plan you already have is missing two or more of these rows, that plan is the reason the build stalled.

Find out which of the 3 builder types you are

Three questions. The answer tells you which part of the library to open first.

You're a first-build type — Next step: open the beginner tier, pick a bookshelf or a bench, and print the cut list before you buy any lumber.

You're a weekend-project type — Next step: filter the library to outdoor and storage builds — straight cuts, one weekend, immediate payoff.

You're a build-to-sell type — Next step: pair the plan library with the included business bonus and start with pieces that sell locally.

You're a furniture-and-joinery type — Next step: go straight to the advanced plans — the joinery detail and hardware specs are where free plans stop.

What buyers say

Quoted verbatim from the product's own website. Individual results vary and testimonials are not a guarantee of results.

"Built two Adirondack chairs from the plans and sold them at a craft fair for $175 each. The whole package cost me $67. Do the math."

CAROL BREWER — CHARLOTTE, NC

"I am brand new to this. Bought my first table saw in January. Built a small bookshelf from one of the beginner plans last month. It's not perfect but it's standing and my wife loves it."

TONY RUSSO — PHOENIX, AZ

"Bought the exact lumber on the materials list. Every piece fit. No extra trips to the store. That's never happened to me before with downloaded plans."

OLIVER WHITFIELD — BIRMINGHAM, UK

"The members area has a search bar right at the top. Typed 'small chicken coop,' got nine options, picked the small-size one. Had it done by Sunday."

JESSICA TURNER — HOUSTON, TX

"Ted has an extensive selection of plans with amazing clarity...thumbs up!" — American Woodworker Magazine

How the refund works

The vendor publishes a 60 day, “love it or shove it” 100% satisfaction guarantee: email the vendor and receive 100% of your money back, no questions asked. Refunds are handled by the merchant through ClickBank, not by this review site. Pricing, packages, bonuses and refund terms are set by the merchant and can change without notice — confirm them on the merchant's page before purchasing.

$67 one-time instead of the vendor's $39/month standard membership.

A single mis-cut sheet of hardwood ply can cost more than the whole $67 library.

Waiting costs the next weekend build: another set of guessed measurements and another trip back to the lumber yard.

What to do next

- 1. Open the merchant’s page and confirm today’s price and what is bundled with it.
- 2. Search the members area for the exact project you want to build next.
- 3. Print that plan’s cut list before you buy a single board.

FAQ: common questions

Short answers to the questions asked most, taken from the merchant's own pages.

Is this a subscription?

No. It is a one-time $67 payment for lifetime access. The vendor's standard membership is priced at $39/month; this offer replaces that recurring charge.

What if the plans are not for me?

There is a 60-day money-back guarantee. Email the merchant inside 60 days and you receive 100% back, no questions asked. Refunds are handled by the merchant, not by this review site.

Am I too new for this?

Plans carry difficulty labels, full measurements and cut lists, so a first build can start with a bookshelf or a bench rather than a cabinet.

How do I get the files?

Access is an instant digital download plus the members area. A USB drive or DVD set can be shipped for an additional fee at checkout.

Can I sell what I build?

The bundle includes a guide on starting a woodworking business covering pricing and where to sell. Commercial terms are set by the merchant.
